

Reference from Bo Bigelow, PopOut founder

I had the pleasure of working closely with Adam Bedient for several months as he served as the lead developer on a mobile app project with me. From the outset, Adam demonstrated exceptional technical skill, clear communication, and a deep understanding of user-centered design. His work product was consistently excellent—clean, efficient code delivered on time and with care. Just as important, Adam was always incredibly patient, responsive, thoughtful, and professional, whether we were troubleshooting bugs or making strategic decisions about the app's functionality. He brought calm energy to every interaction and was a true partner in the development process. I couldn't possibly recommend him more highly. If you're looking for a developer who is both technically outstanding and a joy to work with, Adam should be at the top of your list. Any team would be lucky to have him.