Lila Wilmerding is a thoughtful business leader who is deeply committed to empowering small businesses across Maine. She excels as a warm collaborator, meeting business leaders where they are to help them move toward what's next. Solutions she shapes are built around each business's actual constraints and goals.

Drawing on real, big-business experience, Lila has a rare ability to translate that background into impact-focused, human-scale strategies that work for smaller organizations. She listens carefully, asks sharp questions, and brings a level of rigor to small-business challenges often reserved for much larger companies. Through it all, she never loses sight of the people and relationships at the center of the work.

What sets Lila apart is her genuine investment in outcomes. She isn't satisfied with advice that sounds good; she wants to see it actually move the needle for the businesses and communities she works with.
