Max Joles is one of - if not the - most talented, well-rounded, and curious people I've ever gotten the chance to work with. While his technical abilities are exceptional, what truly makes Max stand out are his remarkable soft skills. He is insatiably curious and patient beyond measure, approaching every challenge with a genuine desire to understand and improve.

What sets Max apart is his rare combination of both “high agency” and “high urgency” — likely being the only person I've worked with in my career where I've never had to ask him where something was or when it was coming. He has the internal willpower and discipline to drive projects to completion, while also having the wisdom to pause at critical moments, ask the right questions, and ultimately deliver a better end product.

Any team or organization would be incredibly fortunate to work with Max.
